R. W. STREET,
Manager of the Gazette.

There will be a great deal of rejoicing this month over railroad extensions. The Missouri Pacific has reached Pueblo. The Midland has reached Glenwood Springs. The Denver & Rio Grande will soon be in Ouray. All these events have given great encouragement to these cities and an impetus to their trade.

The new rates which go into effect by the Pool Railroads [illegible] are exactly the same as the Burlington rates which we printed some days ago. The Burlington rates will now be the same as the pooled roads, as a compromise has been effected. But the rates that it proposed and urged were five cents a hundred less on fourth and fifth class, and A, B, C and E class. The proposed Burlington rates are ten cents higher on second and third class. As most of the shipments are fourth class and lower, the rates which the Burlington proposed were better than [illegible] which we shall have.

Yesterday was Gambetta's opportunity. He never has had a success, for among the republicans and for that reason the [illegible] at first so scattered. Said-Carnot is not a well-known Frenchman. The encyclopedias let him severely alone. Still he has frequently been in the ministry in the last ten years. Last spring as minister of finance he introduced the budget to the national assembly. It is possible in his favor that he is not known. He has had ability enough to occupy high place, now but has had enough but not to make a reputation. Presidencies form too great a part of the stage [illegible] career.

[illegible] editorial page in New York city [illegible] the Tribune. It is urging the republican party to be [illegible] manly. It is over fifteen years since such advice has been sought by the Tribune. It begins to look encouraging for 1880. The [illegible] managers are realizing that two faced platforms are played out. There was a time when conservatism of principle was more feared than defeat at an election. There is no profounder philosophy than "he who seeks to save his life shall lose it." When the party framed its platforms to boldly and clearly announce its political principles, it was successful. But for fifteen years there has been too much leadership of the small boy sort, and platforms have been framed to prevent defeat rather than [illegible] and not to tell the truth.

The election of a successor to Grevy for the time being averts a crisis in French politics. But a precedent has been established which is very dangerous. Heretofore any opposition to an administration has been turned against the ministry. But now it is turned against a president who is forced to resign spite the fact that his term of office would not end until 1893 and spite the fact that impeachment is the only method recognized in the French constitution for removing a president before his term has expired. This affair must weaken confidence in the stability of the French government. Only a popular impulse is needed now to remove a president. The only alternative is revolution. The people of this country have much reason to be thankful to the founders of our government that the rights and powers of the different branches of our government are so clearly defined that no department can infringe on another.

OUR NEW YEAR'S EDITION.

We have already received a large number of responses to the circulars sent out regarding our New Years edition. The size of the paper will be much greater than we had anticipated. With the cuts now ordered, and five more which we [illegible] will be $400. Instead of being printed on one sheet as we had anticipated, it will require three sheets of nine book paper, each 20x30, to print the engravings. Some idea of the cost of this paper may be obtained when we state that there will be three hundred and seventy-five pounds of book paper to each thousand copies. If we print three sheets of the present size of the Gazette, [illegible] the whole paper in each thousand copies, will weigh one hundred and twenty-five pounds. This will bring the weight of each thousand copies up to six hundred pounds or more than one cent per pound to each copy. The paper in each copy will cost, over, two cents. Besides this there will be ten thousand impressions for each form and copies of the paper. The composition will be nearly five hundred dollars. Besides this there will be the expense of the preparation of copy which would [illegible] a half dollar. The cost of this for ten thousand copies will be very nearly the price received, ten cents per copy. A copy of this paper ought to go to every physician and every newspaper in the country. Besides those that are distributed through private means it has been impossible to solicit cuts from every one. It was first intended not to print more than half the number of cuts that we shall now print. The enterprise has been so popular that the matter has grown [illegible] than was anticipated. There will be one buildings that ought to have appeared that it will be impossible now to put in. Mr. Rickler has tried to reach every one to give them an opportunity, but this was impossible. It is quite likely that there may be two pages left that orders may be given for up to Thursday noon by Mr. Murphy will receive them at the Alamo hotel. We trust that no one will be disappointed in this matter as Mr. Rickler has instructed to have all views of buildings representative, below will be found the list of cuts which we shall print.

CHURCHES.

The Episcopal church with the new addition. The Congregational church, and Presbyterian church, according to the plans already drawn and now submitted to the contractors. The Methodist church. Each one of these churches will be an extra four inches by five.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The city hall, St Francis hospital, the D. & R. G. railroad station, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad station, the Institute for the Blind, and the interior of the opera house.

SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

Colorado college, the High school, the [illegible] the Lake, the Cutler, the Garfield schools, and the Sisters of Loretto academy.

BUSINESS BLOCKS.

F. E. Dow's block, Robertson block and Robinson's drug store.

Besides these there will be interiors of the stores of Mayor Dow, Fairley Bros., H. T. O'Brien and Perkins Bros.

RESIDENCES.

Mayor Dow's, the Hon. Irving Howbert's, Mr. O. Metcalf's, Mr. Matthew Kennedy's, Mr. A. A. McKinney's, Col. J. H. Bacon's, and Count James Pourtales'.

HOTELS.

The Alamo hotel and the Spaulding house.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The interior of the Odd Fellows lodge, a large birdseye view of Broadmoor dairy, costing two hundred dollars, birdseye view of Tejon street, birdseye view of Pike's Peak avenue, view of Alamo Park and Acacia Place; a combination of five views of North and South Cheyenne canons, a view of the source of the water works.

MANITOU.

There will also be the following Manitou views.

HOTELS.

The Manitou house, Mansion house, Cliff house and Barker house.

RESIDENCES.

Mayor John Hulburt and Dr. W. A. Bell.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Denver & Rio Grande station, the Colorado Midland station, Manitou Bath House, Manitou Springs.

Many of these cuts will be four inches by five. The Mansion house and Manitou hotels will be five by seven. The most expensive view is the large view of the Broadmoor dairy, giving a birdseye view of this extensive place. The two street views will also be large.

LITERARY.

THE CENTURY FOR DECEMBER.

The December Century opens with a frontispiece portrait of Lincoln from a plaster cast made about the time of his inauguration, which event is the subject of the present part of the Lincoln history. Messrs. Nicolay and Hay continue in this number the promised publication of [illegible] material. The narrative begins with Mr. Lincoln's departure from Springfield, and includes an authentic account of his farewell to [illegible] and of the speeches made at Indianapolis, Columbus, Steubenville, Trenton, Philadelphia and Harrisburg. An exact statement of the facts in regard to Lincoln's secret night journey through Baltimore is given, accompanied by unpublished letters from Seward, Scott, and General Stone. The circumstances attending the revision of the inaugural address are related with particularity, the text of that document being printed in full, with the references to Mr. Seward's suggestions for alterations in foot notes, so that the reader may see which of these suggestions were adopted by the president and which rejected. The comparison affords an insight into Mr. Lincoln's attitude toward the crisis which he was so soon to be called upon to meet. The famous closing paragraph is printed in fac-simile, accompanied by a similar reproduction of Seward's suggestion for the same paragraph. Accompanying the paper are portraits of Seward, Frederick W. Seward, and Ward H. Lamon, together with a sketch of the inaugural scene.

Prof. Charles W. Smith, of Princeton college, contributes an important and interesting paper, entitled "The United Churches of the United States," being a review of the Century letters on Christian Unity, which were written as comment on his former article of the same title. The letters received are from many denominations, and Prof. Smith in summing up says: "Never were the signs as well as the needs of such union more apparent, never was the feeling so deep and growing that the divisions in the Christian church must cease, now soon to arrest the [illegible]."

Mr. Kennan's second paper deals with the "Prison Life of the Russian Revolutionists," and we see the [illegible] Were the people aware of the wrongs which call forth [illegible] many thousands of them are [illegible] of Siberia, and of the horrors [illegible] the prisons, [illegible] for the Year, and what a responsible [illegible] to take his life. The material upon which these articles are based has been derived mainly [illegible] and [illegible] a large number of Russian political exiles [illegible] the statements of three or four [illegible] and women who have been shut up in those prisons for [illegible] from six months to seven years and all [illegible] from 1871 to 1879, and [illegible] the statement of Russian officials who are now or have been at some time connected with the prison administration. Mr. Kennan describes the defects in Russian law and in prison management, the treatment of political prisoners, and their duty. Of the spy system, and cites instances of Russian cruelty as cited in support of the writer's conclusion.

An illustrated paper on the Sea of Galilee is contributed by Edward L. Wilson. The [illegible] is the result of personal observation and experience in Palestine, during which Mr. Wilson made a large number of photographs, which have been utilized in the illustrations which accompany the article.

Mr. Brander Matthews contributes an [illegible] study of journalism entitled "Notes on Parisian Newspapers," in which are characterized various leading journals such as the "Figaro," the "Temps," the "Soleil," the "Constitutionnel," the "Journal des Debats," the "Republique Francaise," "Petit Journal," the "Charivari," and a number of others. Among the portraits are those of Alfred Wolff, Rochefort, Clemenceau, Cluseret and Sarcey.

Mrs. M. G. van Rensselaer writes this month, in her series on the French cathedrals, about Durham, of which she says: "Among all the cathedrals of England Durham is perhaps the most imposing, and its situation is unsurpassed, past rivalry." Mr. Pennell's illustrations confirm the writer's praise.

The fiction of the number embraces the second part of "The Grayson," a novel of western life by Edward Eggleston, the second fourth of George W. Cable's "[illegible] of the Tecle country At Large," and the first part of "The Dissenter," Frank R. Stockton's sequel to "Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine." There is also a short story by J. [illegible] Perkins, entitled "After the War."

Mr. Irving a Faust is the subject of two papers, one by Mr. and Mrs. Pennell in praise of its "pictorial [illegible]" which are hardly less piquant in description than attractive in reality. The other paper, which is not signed, deals with the acting.

The Tonic Sol-Fa system of writing and teaching music is similarly the subject of two short papers, one by Theodore F. Seward in advocacy of it and describing its remarkable growth in England, and another, more critical, by Mr. H. E. Krehbiel, musical critic of the New York "Tribune," whose conclusion is that the system is admirably adapted to the study of harmony and singing, but ill adapted to the study and practice of instrumental music.

The [illegible] of the Time are editorial articles on "Municipal Parties," on the proposed "Constitution Day," and "The Seventieth Year of Our National Disgrace" (i. e. the license of literary piracy).

Mr. Brander Matthews contributes an "Open Letter" on "Cheap Books," presenting in the most interesting way the probable effect upon American literature of the passage of the American Copyright league's bill establishing international copyright. This article is in the nature of a demonstration that the only books which would be appreciably dearer by reason of such a bill are English books; and the writer holds that "a well-nigh exclusive diet of English [illegible] full of the foolishness and superstitions and survivals of which we have been striving for a century to rid ourselves, is not what is [illegible] for those who need to be [illegible] and enlightened to do their duty as citizens of a free republic."

The short papers on "The Education of the Blind" come to a conclusion with a consideration of the occupations which are practicable to this class.

The number contains no battle paper but, as announced a few pages of "Memoranda on the Civil War" (including a demonstration of the confederate strength in the Atlanta campaign by Major E. C. Dawes, of Cincinnati, a rejoinder to General Robertson by Colonel Mosby, a short article by General Robert Ransom on the service of his division at Fredericksburg, together with anecdotes.

The poetry of the number is contributed by Mrs. Annie Fields, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, Edith M. Thomas, Stuart Sterne, Maurice F. Egan, Henry Anes Blood, and Walt Whitman (a nature, "Twilight"), and in Brie a Brac by John Vance Cheney, Charles H. Crandall, Jennie W. Netter, and others.

LITERARY NOTES.

Mr. J. R. Lowell will contribute several papers to The Atlantic during the coming year.

Lord Wolseley is writing a life of the Duke of Marlborough.

Lucy C. Lillie gives some personal reminiscences of Jean Ingelow in the December Lippincott's.

It is said that an evening edition of the London Daily Telegraph will be issued next year, the political policy to be on liberal lines.

Gunn & Co. have ready "Washington and His Country," being Irving's Life of Washington abridged, supplemented and continued by John Fiske.

A new collection of stories by Joel Chandler Harris is announced by the Scribners. Its title is "Free Joe, and Other Georgian Sketches."

Pierre Loti Athenæum says that authoritative by that Rider Haggard does not propose to visit America at [illegible], though he may do so next autumn.

"Parnassus Actresses" is a collection of portraits, [illegible] by Henry Ward Beecher, from Ophelia to Parthenia, and a [illegible] of Wagner's "Ring of the Nibelung," by Charles Fabens Kelley. The February number of the Art Amateur will have a portrait of Miss Mortimer, as [illegible].

A curious "Life of Pascal Bacon" is in course of preparation by the Rev. Edward C. Towne. The second volume of Sala's [illegible] Journal Book of the Diary Stakes" is announced to be [illegible] Messrs. Scribner and Welford. It will illustrate the [illegible] of the fourteen that Sala's editor and writer could have written the years and [illegible] of Shakespeare. A great [illegible] will be made in Life of Shakespeare.

T. Y. Crowell & Co. announce for early publication translations of "The Vagrant, and Other Tales," by Vladimir Korolenko, and "A Russian Proprietor, and Other Stories," by Count L. N. Tolstoi. Korolenko belongs to the younger generation of Russian writers and is [illegible] Tolstoi [illegible] only within [illegible] years to fame as a novelist.

Mr. F. Blake Crofton, one of the librarians of the Provincial library of Halifax, N. S., recently read a paper on "Sam Slick" before the Historical society of that city. This paper is preparatory to supplement with another on Judge Haliburton's merits as a wit and [illegible] as a writer, his opinions, [illegible] of the [illegible] of the letter on American humor, and the various qualities of his style. It is understood that Mr. Crofton will take the ground that, if not one of the greatest writers of the century, certainly a very [illegible] humorist was [illegible] by Mr. Haliburton, and that his [illegible] and [illegible] entitle him to [illegible] and [illegible] with Irving, Hawthorne and Lowell.

The Academy says: "In a [illegible] sense The Boys' Papers, a set of three [illegible] by Rossa Cecil and a serial story, [illegible] by Charles Fabens Kelley, [illegible] January number of the Art Amateur will have a portrait of Miss Mortimer, as [illegible]."

A very distressing accident occurred yesterday afternoon shortly before one o'clock which resulted in the death of Bertha Robbins, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Robbins who reside at No 123 South Cascade avenue. Mr. Robbins went to Denver on Friday afternoon to meet Mrs. Robbins and his daughter on their return from a visit to relatives in Kansas. They arrived home on the Denver, Texas & Gulf railroad yesterday [illegible] half past twelve o'clock, the train being an hour late. Mr. Robbins remained at the depot to attend to some matters connected with their baggage and Mrs. Robbins and the little girl started to walk up Cucharas street on their way home. They had hardly crossed the railroad track when the omnibus from the station came suddenly upon them. Without a second's warning the little child was knocked down and one of the heavy wheels of the vehicle which contained seven passengers passed over her chest and right leg. The latter was broken in two places and her chest was quite severely bruised. A physician was immediately summoned, but the best of medical skill was employed in an avail. She died shortly after two o'clock. That somebody was to blame for the accident there can be no question. At the time it happened there were two engines at the depot, one of which was attached to the passenger train and the other belonging to an extra freight train waiting for orders to go into the Santa Fe yards on west. This latter engine occupied about thirty feet of the street crossing, in direct violation of one of the city ordinances prohibiting engines or trains from obstructing the street crossings. The freight engine had backed up on the track south of Cucharas street so that the two engines were directly in front of each other and the distance between them was not over sixty feet. When the omnibus turned the corner of the station building and the horses were on the freight engine they immediately took fright. The driver whom [illegible] into the street and started to drive them away. The crossing between the two engines. When about in the middle of the crossing the freight engine began to blow off steam, which thoroughly frightened the already frightened horses. They wheeled to the east and the [illegible] struck Mrs Robbins and threw her with great violence to the ground. When Mrs Robbins was struck by the [illegible] carrying the little girl, but while she was thrown down she dropped the child and as the horses turned to the [illegible] him. The child's body. At the time of the accident the driver had no control of the horses and was unable to check or guide them. They were certainly a sight of judge not to report to attempt to cross the track, with [illegible] passengers between two cars, and with a train of freight cars [illegible]
